Boom Box

Boom Box was inspired by the cultural touchstone of growing up in the '80s—being fascinated by and worshiping the boombox. For Merenda, it was recording her own voice, the radio and listening to it constantly. The gold and black colorway was inspired by RUNDMC, a legendary Queens Hip Hop group, whose tape Merenda would listen to over and over again, while staring at the speakers.

Chesterfield was designed to mimic the woven textures of Jacquard fabric. Jacquard is a weaving process that was developed in the early 1800s in France. The technology completely revolutionized weaving, allowing for complex fabrics like brocades to be mechanized.

This pattern originated from a Jacquard Merenda designed depicting the cornfields of Maryland. She learned Jacquard woven programming in school and, after designing Chesterfield, had a mill recreate it from her design.

Disintegration

Disintegration—named after an album by The Cure—is a collage of photographs taken during days of walking through the streets of Havana, arranged in and filled with textures that are dissolving and reemerging in triangular forms. Merenda loved the way people used what they had to create patterns in Havana’s architecture. By using pieces of broken tile and plaster—and recycling what was around them—people created compositions of playful colors that work off of one another, creating vibrant mosaics.

NYC Alphabet

NYC Alphabet is a tribute to the “straight letter” hand style in graffiti culture. Merenda has a graffiti background from her history of hanging out with, learning from and painting with other “writers” in Maryland, Atlanta and NYC. She created this pattern for a range of uses, from modern event spaces to a child’s bedroom.

Merenda created this pattern from rubbings on various NYC Manhole covers, specifically covers made by foundries in NYC. Like the Native Americans whose culture and history lies beneath these manholes, the foundries near the turn of the 20th century are a thing of the past and do not thrive anymore. NYC manhole production is now outsourced and made in India.

Oysters

While working on her What's Below collection in London, Merenda was inspired by some beautiful oysters she had eaten. After bringing the shells back to her flat and doing several continuous line drawings with pen on paper for each of the shells, Oysters was born.

Oysters played a major role in NYC's history—from the Lenape Native Americans who used them for food, plaster, tools and burial grounds, to the great oyster trade era near the turn of the 20th century. Oysters were so abundant that they used the shells to pave the streets.

Reflection

Reflection was created using crumbled and dyed wax paper. The pattern takes on its own form depending on the color and its surroundings. Light bouncing off the bottom of a pool or a marble countertop, Reflection was inspired by allowing ourselves the space to step back and reflect on life.

Spray

One day while walking through Midtown NYC and photographing walls, Merenda came across one that had layers of white and black spray paint with natural concrete textures coming through.

Spray has a Gotham feel, bringing the outdoors inside while creating a spacious patterned look.

Stars pays homage to the eight-pointed star, or octagram, which has many meanings—religious, astrological and otherwise. It is a symbol of regeneration in the Christian religion as well as the Eightfold Path in the Buddhist tradition. Through its links with the great eight-fold systems of East and West, the trigrams of the I Ching, and the Pagan Wheel of the Year, it offers connotations of wholeness, rebirth and cyclical infinity.

Suncatcher

Suncatcher is pure moving energy that was created from a full-scale watercolor rainbow painting. Full of its own imperfections, it continues to move no matter its path. With its flowing movement and large scale, it's undoubtedly eye-catching. Suncatcher brings movement to blocked energy and allows your deepest inhibitions to emerge.

Kahan worked with treated paper in a consistent triangle shape to create a free-flowing map that reflects the need to both back off and bear down when finding the path of balance in life. The interplay of precision, randomness, structure and fluidity is expressed in this colorful and mesmerizing wallpaper designed from original artwork by Kahan.

Inspired by Merenda's own yoga and meditation practice, she created Yoga Garden Toile to reflect the feeling of serenity that comes when we embrace the moment as it is. Her intention is to inspire people to engage in their own practice.

Influenced by 19th century French scenic wallpaper, Merenda painted the design with gouache and then redrew it with pen and ink, allowing for the space of classic simplicity. The pattern combines western and eastern cultures in a toile style wallpaper.

Custom “NYC Manhole” Colorways for Whitmans

Merenda Wallpaper created exclusive NYC Manhole colorways for the Whitmans restaurants in both NYC and Miami Beach.

Custom “Plaster” Colorway for the Discovery+ TV series, “We Bought a Funeral Home”

The series documents the Blumberg family’s journey as they turn an 1880s funeral parlor into their dream home. Merenda Wallpaper collaborated with homeowner and interior designer, Heather Blumberg, on a custom Green and Gold “Plaster” colorway that was installed in the ceiling of one of their sitting rooms (pictured above).

Heather also incorporated Merenda's "Marbre" pattern in Magenta and "Snake Party" pattern in Gold on Black in her powder room (above) and cocktail lounge (left).

Sarah's Story

Sarah Merenda

founded Merenda Wallpaper in 2006.

As a master wallpaper installer with 25 years experience, Sarah brings her unique perspective and knowledge of installation to her design process. This expertise allows her to take real-life considerations of how scale and design merge together in any given space.

Sarah fell in love with textiles at a young age, collecting vintage clothing from a local auction house on the eastern shore of Maryland, and while working at a vintage clothing shop in Baltimore. She grew up in old farmhouses surrounded by wallpaper, and has memories of her mother wallpapering the rooms with distinctive patterns.

Sarah followed her six uncles into the wallpaper hanging trade in 1996 in Atlanta, GA. When she wasn't working, she fulfilled her love for graffiti art by spray-painting on trains and abandoned buildings. In 1999, she moved to New York City where she studied painting and drawing at Spring Studio in Soho, and received a BFA in Textile Surface Design from the Fashion Institute of Technology. She spent a semester abroad at the Chelsea College of Art & Design in London, and eventually started her company in 2004.

In her company's early years, Sarah focused mostly on wallpaper installation, mural painting, and hand screen printed walls and fabric. In 2012, she began manufacturing and selling her patterns, beginning with Elva Rose and Corn Rows. She later opened her first storefront studio in Queens, NY in 2015.

Sarah relocated to Cherry Hill, NJ in late 2020 with her family to find a little more space, and to continue expanding her business in surface design while exploring her new surroundings.
